fornia's superiority in everything. Reperous, while other parts of the coun-countability. try are dull, made this deduction:

There is no effect without a contributory cause. Chance may favor individuals, but she fortunes of communities are regulated by something more stable. Why does Los Angeles glow in a darkened industrial sky "like a brooch in a beggar's breast?" Why is this one little spot away out on the rim of the Pacific alone favored by the gods of industry? Far removed from the hitherto recognized centera of industrial activity, hamnered in sending its products to eastern markets by freight rates that are enormously high, with a hinterland sparsely populated and whose development has just begun, why is Los Angeles alone advancing while the rest of the country is receding?

Divers solutions of this economic riddle will be offered by the apologists for less prosperous communities. "Propaganda based on elaborate and misleading advertising" will cry the envious. "Touring crop selling at profiteer ing prices" others will allege. "Climate and the moving-picture industry" will not be without supporters. Perhaps in some remote section a still, small voice, the voice of truth that never rants or villifies, will utter in the midst of the clanging of the anvil chorus the true solution: INDUSTRIAL FREEDOM.

Nonsense! Los Angeles has no in-United States—homes that do not feel bor are definitely chosen."

Talaat, chief diplomatic agent of the Turks, has made this statement:

"Morgenthau is not liked in Turkey. The Turkish people have little confidence in his good faith or impartiality. How President Wilson, after all of Morgenthau's statements about Turks, could name him mediator between Turkey and Armenia, even if a mediator were necessary, is beyond the comprehension of every Turk. The nationalists want nothing to do with him."

Discussing the Turkish situation. Talaat asserted that it was most encouraging for the nationalists. He dwelt with pride on the fact that, although Turkey has been involved for almost ten years in uninterrupted warfare, the Turkish people are now tenaciously continuing their warfare against the dictated Sevres peace treaty and "refuse to become the slaves of the entente."

This is the ancient attitude of the constantly complaining against the treatment they receive from outside their sphere of influence. the committee on highways and bridges. House bill No. 52 presented by Speaker Callister, relates to the amendment of the present laws relative to abatement of court actions. It would provide for insertion in the existing statute of a clause which would permit the continuance of the right to bring action, if such a cause existed, even if the party originally having the right to bring such action should die or the party against whom such action might be brought should die. Expressed in non-legal terms, a relative could bring action in behalf of the estate or heirs of a deceased party, or the heirs or legal representative of a deceased party would have to defend an action brought against the deceased, or his heirs or estate. The bill prevents abatement of action because death has intervened before action was actually brought. The bill was referred to the judiciary committee.

was referred to the judiciary committee.

House bill No. 21, providing for taking of the annual school census in October instead of in July, although it was in the hands of the senate, is to be brought back into the house for reconsideration. This was decided upon just before adjournment of the house yesterday. Notice had been given on Monday, when the bill passed the house, that such motion would be made.

Upon reconsideration, a motion was made to recommit the measure to the committee on education, and again the same forces lined up against each other, but adjournment was so close the strict division was not noticeable, and the bill was recommitted by a vote of 29 to 15, three members being absent.
